What to Expect AS YOU HEAL

The entire healing process will take 6-8 weeks depending on your body's regeneration and age. Your new liner will go through several phases during the healing cycle and will appear much darker the next day.

Please note that because of natural skin regeneration, after recovery (peeling) your liner may appear lighter and smaller than original. Once healing of the skin begins, it will look flakey or peel off. However, this is just superficial color and dry skin being naturally removed from your lid.

Your liner may even go through what is known as the "Disappearing phase" where there appears to be no color left at all. This is completely normal.

Color will return. Please trust the healing process and allow your body time to process your new ink.
